DIVISION 3 BUDGET HIGHLIGHTS

Ensuring Ipswich's established suburbs are not left behind is a key focus for Division 3 in Ipswich City Council's 2023–2024 Budget.

Ipswich City Council has delivered a measured, responsible budget with a rate rise under inflation amid major economic pressures.

Division 3 Councillor Marnie Doyle said she was pleased to see community infrastructure receive a significant boost in this year's budget.

"From $1.5 million for a new canteen and upgrades at Wiley Street Park to the construction of a new clubhouse at Jim Donald Parklands, this council is delivering for the community," Cr Doyle said.

"Significant money will also be invested in the Riverview Resource Recovery Centre which will not only benefit Division 3 residents but the broader Ipswich community."

Division 3 Councillor Andrew Fechner said local families would benefit significantly from a $700,000 investment in Cameron Park at Booval, as well as other key projects across the division.

"The important Queen Victoria Parade bikeway construction will be completed along with end of trip facilities for cyclists in Tulumur Place," Cr Fechner said.

"These investments are about securing the liveability of our city's established suburbs and ensuring they receive appropriate recognition and investment in community infrastructure.

"We would like to thank our State and Federal government partners for funding contributions to some of the above projects."

This year's budget includes a critical $267.2 million investment in capital works with a $75 million commitment to flood recovery projects and more than $70 million to deliver quality waste recovery programs for the community.
